The land's history, life, songs, and Hayashi...
You can now hear the "sound" of Tamatebako

In the Edo period, young ayu fish caught in the Tama River were carried on a pole along the Koshu-Kaido Road and delivered to ayu wholesalers in Yotsuya-mitsuke. People said that ayu carriers sang the song, "Ayukatsugiuta" all night long while running, which seemed to protect them against tanuki, and the local people could hear the singing from far away while they slept.

Program

Daijyataiji

Nobehayashi Kagura Hozonkai is said to have been founded at the end of the Edo period, so it has a long history. In the Taisho period, people increasingly mingled with neighboring areas, and Hozonkai came to frequently make tours of Hachioji, Kunitachi, Tachikawa, Akishima, Fussa, etc. Since then, the Hozonkai's activities have continued to this day, except for the suspended time (until 1947) due to the Pacific War.

Now, while many of the elders who lent their aid to resume the activities have passed away, successors carry on the tradition of Hayashi and Kagura. The repertoire of Hayashi includes not only Jumatsuryu Style Yatai-bayashi, but also Kamakura, Kuni-gatame, Shicyome, Syoden, and Okame and Hyottoko Ninba, which are called "Oma-mono." There are also two Kagura performances, Sambaso and Daijyataiji.

Currently, there are 20 adults and 27 families of children's associations, and we hold many annual events together. However, the members have aged in recent years, so we are making efforts, such as by actively recruiting new members, to ensure that the traditional performing arts can be passed on to future generations. In particular, we would like to greatly enrich the children's association, which will lead the next generation, so that Hayashi-Kagura can take root more strongly in the community.

Ishikawa-cho Mitake-jinja Ryutou no mai Hozonkai «Hachioji City»

Program

Ishikawa-cho Ryutou no mai

It is said that the dance started in 1573 to celebrate the completion of Mitake Gongen in the Sairen-ji Temple. The head of Ryutou no mai, which has a face of a "dragon's head" with two horns, is thought to be modeled after Hachidai Ryuo in Buddhism. Each dance is performed by three lions called Ogashira, Nakagashira, Mejishi, and six Hanagasa, several flutes and a few singers. It takes about 30 minutes on average.

Ryutou no mai, which has been handed down for 450 years this year, is performed in mid-September every year, at Mitake-jinja Shrine on the first day of the festival and at Sairen-ji Temple on the second day. Hachioji City's intangible folk cultural property.

Sanbasou

Hachioji Kuruma Ningyo

A one-man puppet play with a history of about 170 years. The puppeteer manipulates a puppet of the same size as a Bunraku, riding on a "Rokuro-guruma" (a box with wheels, and you can change direction if you put your weight on it). Registered as a national important intangible folk cultural property in 2022.

Sanbasou is a celebration dance based on the Noh play "Okina" to pray for peace throughout the world, peace in the country, and a bountiful harvest.

It consists of "Momi no dan," which performs rice planting, and "Suzu no dan," which performs sowing seeds with a bell. It has been danced upon the opening of Ningyo Joruri, Kabuki, and other various performing arts. One of its purposes is to pray for the performance's success without incident.

Hachioji Kuruma Ningyo Nishikawa Koryu Troup «Hachioji City»/Sekkyobushi no Kai «Hachioji City»

Program

Shinodazuma - The Departure of Kuzunoha -

Nishikawa Koryu Troup: The predecessor of the Nishikawa Koryu Troup began when Tokitaro Senuma (the second Nishikawa Koryu) became Nishikawa Koryu's pupil. From the end of the Taisho period to the beginning of the Showa period, it received support from Mitamura Engyo, Taira Otojiro, Kawatake Shigetoshi, and others.

The performing arts of the Koryu Troup are based on traditional Kuruma Ningyo maneuvers, and they incorporate Otome Bunraku techniques, and they also devise original equipment to enable brand new works to be performed. Not only in Japan but also in other countries, the Kuruma Ningyo technique shows the future generation the way that local culture and Japanese culture should be.

Sekkyobushi no Kai: Satsuma style Sekkyobushi was born in the Edo period by the first Satsuma Wakatayu in the Kansei era, and by the end of the Edo period, it was transmitted from Edo to the surrounding area and gained popularity. Sekkyobushi no Kai was established in 1986 to preserve and inherit the Satsuma style Sekkyobushi, and is an intangible cultural property preservation organization designated by Tokyo Metropolitan Government.

Stories about Hachioji

The Hachioji Kagee Project is a graduate class at Tokyo Zokei University with the aim of collaborating with the local community and studying "Japanese Magic Lanterns", which were in fashion among the common people in the late Edo period. Since 2007, we have been producing and performing theatrical screen works using light and shadow with a contemporary style of interpretation while continuing to preserve our traditions. In the Tama region, Grandmaster Tamagawa Buncho and his pupils actively demonstrated the Japanese Shadow Play style from the Meiji period to the early Showa period.

Program Festival music in Kamicho, Nakacho, and Shimocho

Haijima Hiyoshijinja Festival began in 1767 and celebrated its 256th anniversary in September 2023.

The local community is divided into three towns, Kamicho (Jumatsuryu style), Nakacho (Kanda style), and Shimocho (Meguro style), and the festival music of each community will be performed on three floats built from the end of the Edo period to the middle of the Meiji period. Haijima was also the first in the neighborhood to rebuild the one-pillar doll float, which had not been seen since the electric wires were laid in 1915. That helped other local groups that owned doll floats feel motivated to rebuild their own one-pillar doll floats.

The festival, also known as the Sakaki Matsuri, is a night festival that is designated as an intangible folk cultural property by Tokyo. At the festival, from midnight to early in the morning, the young people parade heroically through the town from midnight until the early morning. Following the odaiko drums at the forefront, they carry portable sakaki tree shrines. Don't miss out!

Kiyari by Hachioji Fire Fighting Memorial Party - A traditional song of which Japan is proud -

Cast

Hachioji Fire Fighting Memorial Party ≪Hachioji City≫

Program

Kiyari

Kiyari is a working song chanted to harmonize with people's breathing while carrying heavy timber or stone. During construction, all members sing a line chanted by the Kiyarishi, the Kiyari chorus leader (ondo-tori). Bringing everyone together like this allows them to exhibit great power. There are many songs with auspicious lyrics, and they are chanted at the beginning of a festival procession or at the start of a celebration such as a wedding ceremony.

The Hachioji Fire Department originates in Hachioji Sennin Doshin. It follows the traditions of Edo-machibikeshi, and is devoted to passing down firefighting history and culture, including its traditions and customs. The Hachioji Fire Fighting Memorial Party was established in 1957 in honor of this. It was also designated as a Hachioji City's intangible folk cultural property (local performing art) in 1960.

Mitaka Awa Odori

Awa Odori is said to have originated from the Bon Odori, which was performed in various parts of Tokushima Prefecture more than 400 years ago. The unique festivals of Tokushima Prefecture are now held all over the country. One of them is Mitaka Awa Odori, which is the base of the Mitaka Ginza Ren activities. Mitaka Ginza Ren was established in 1977 as a local store association.

Not only do we perform in Mitaka, but we also travel to various places, performing at events, elementary schools, nursing homes, etc., to help others enjoy the Awa Odori. We have about 40 members, ranging from small children to adults, and we are active throughout the year with the motto of having fun while dancing. In recent years, we have learned from the Tokushima association, where the Awa Odori originated. "Dancing fool, watching fool: all fools, so let's dance together!" You may have heard this phrase. So, why not dance in tune with Hayashi?

Exhibition

Murayama Oshima Tsumugi «Musashimurayama City»

Murayama Oshima Tsumugi is a double-faced silk fabric with a precise pattern woven using traditional hand-crafted techniques. The process includes ingenious dyeing in various colors with kasuri-thread held between two plates engraved with striped patterns, each of which constitutes the finished pattern in the end. There are about 30 processes required for the production of kasuri-thread, thread dyeing, thread winding, and hand weaving. It's only through the skillful work of several people, such as the kasuritaya, dyer, makiya, and weavers, that a fabric for a kimono is finished.
